Welcome from the President

Hello all,

Welcome to our March edition of the CRF newsletter.

The CRF has always acted to bring people together. My thoughts are with the people of Ukraine during the Russian invasion of their homeland. Their bravery is astounding.

I hope a solution for peace is found soon.

Whilst this month's edition of the newsletter is brief, it does contain important and exciting information about upcoming CRF events such as the 17th Annual CRF Conference which will be hosted by the Registrar of Companies, Ministry of Economic Development in the Maldives.

As always, if you have any feedback about our newsletter or wish to contribute to a future edition, please contact us at secretariat@corporateregistersforum.org.

ANNUAL CRF CONFERENCE - MALDIVES

We are pleased to announce that the 17th Annual CRF Conference will be hosted by the Registrar of Companies, Ministry of Economic Development in the Maldives.

Early-bird registrations will be launched this month, with the conference planned to go ahead in late 2022.

This will be an in-person meeting enabling all of us to embark on our common objective, to create a more conducive business registry infrastructure.

I do hope world events will allow us to come together to celebrate the CRF community and learn from each other in person.

The call for papers theme this year is: Transforming Business Registries for the post-pandemic era.

All member jurisdictions will be invited to make a submission. Sponsorship opportunities will also be available.

More information will be provided to members this month.

TECHNICAL WORKSHOP

We warmly invite you to our next Technical Workshop, to take place on Tuesday 29 March 2022 at 0730 BST (GMT+1).

The workshop will be hosted by Companies House, UK and will take place via MS Teams.

About the Workshop

This workshop aims to explore the work Companies House is doing to help directors understand their responsibilities better.

We will provide an overview of recent external communications campaigns that have used a variety of approaches to encourage compliance and online filing behaviours.

We'll also share our future plans to use behavioural insights and evidence from user research to improve customer outputs, reduce avoidable contact and achieve key business outcomes.

Want to host a CRF Technical Workshop?

Our next virtual CRF Technical Workshop will be held at the end of March 2022.

The aim of our Technical Workshops is to help us all in gaining insights into the operations of other registries across the globe.
